

HIVES, in collaboration with the RCAH Center for Poetry, is excited to welcome JJJJerome Ellis to Michigan State University for a performance and discussion at the intersections of disability, race, and performance.

JJJJerome Ellis is a blk disabled animal, stutterer, and artist. He prays, reads, gardens, cycles, wanders, and plays. Through music, literature, performance, and video he researches relationships among blackness, disabled speech, divinity, nature, sound, and time.
